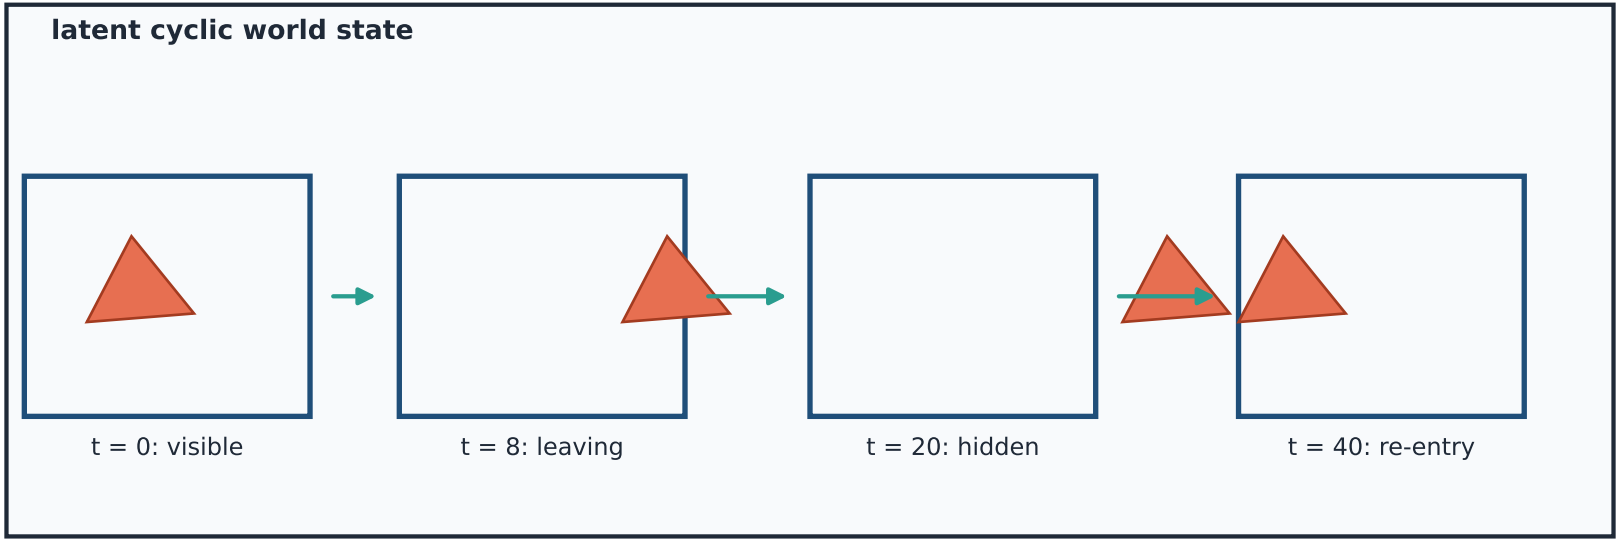
The world state persists outside the observed viewport

A later prediction can depend on appearance that is absent from every recent frame



The observation window loses the object; retained state determines whether its earlier identity is still usable.