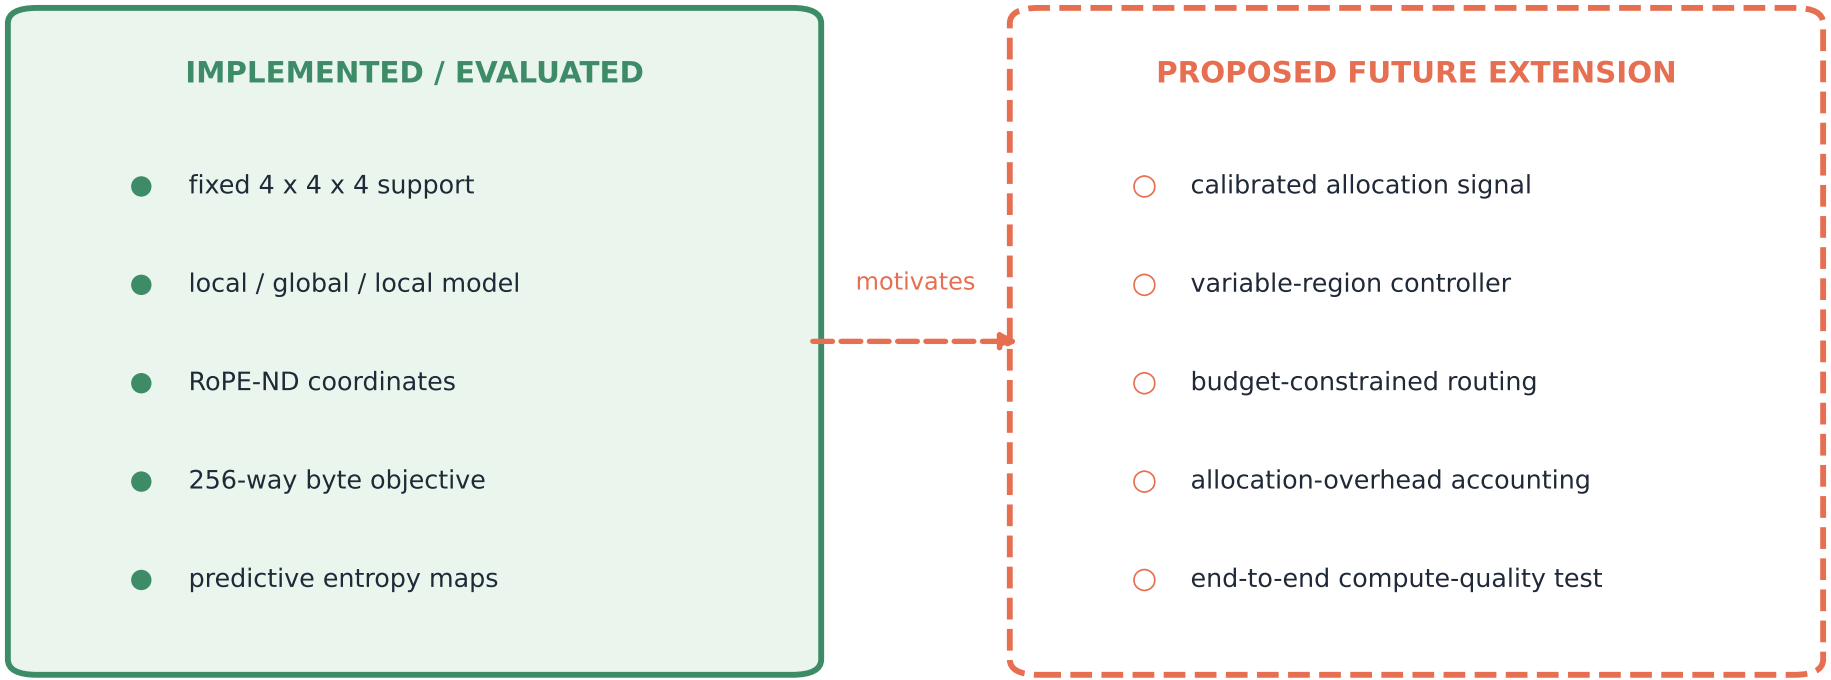
Measured representation and proposed allocation are different claims



Entropy structure justifies a testable policy hypothesis; it is not evidence that dynamic allocation already improves efficiency.